Good thing I just got here!

An aerial, high-angle photograph of a very busy street intersection in Japan, likely Shibuya. The scene is filled with a large number of pedestrians crossing the street at various points, including wide zebra crossings. Several cars and vans are visible on the roads. In the upper left, a building with a large glass facade and the word "TSUTAYA" is visible. In the upper right, there are more buildings with colorful signs, including one with a rainbow flag. A speech bubble with a black border and a tail pointing towards the center of the intersection contains the text "Man, this place is cramped!". The overall atmosphere is one of intense urban activity and congestion.

Man, this place is cramped!

AND FINALLY, 10. "THE SHIBUYA CROSSING LOCATED IN THE SHIBUYA WARD IS THE BUSIEST PLACE IN THE WORLD."

THANK YOU FOR VISITING!
WE HOPE YOU COME AGAIN
SOON.
